

Peta Kennedy

After graduating from St Brigid's College in 1990, Peta went on to study Visual Arts Management. With this knowledge and from working as an Art Curator in Perth, she was asked to join the replica of Captain Cook's, H.M. Bark Endeavour as the Curator and spent the next few years sailing around the world. It was an amazing experience and the places and people she met along the way were inspiring.

After deciding she needed to find her 'land legs', Peta moved to Sydney and started a new chapter in telecommunications. She was involved in Project Management for the next 15 years, managing large scale rollouts of networks and lived in over 12 countries. Peta feels very fortunate to have experienced first-hand many different cultures and is now proud to be a local in our community.

It was during a contract in Amsterdam that Peta met her Irish husband and after successfully luring him back to the Perth Hills, they both fell in love with the community and the people. After having two children, one of whom is still at St Brigid's College, the Kennedy's decided to change things up and have just finished building a multigenerational family home for three generations to live in together.

Life has been very exciting and kind to the family whose purpose for the next few years is to give back and serve.

Peta is very excited to have joined the College's Advisory Council.
